Re: Estate of Allison Roebke v. ADCO Firearms, LLC, et al.

Dear Ms. Roebke:

We are pleased that you have selected us to represent you in connection with the above-captioned matter. We appreciate the confidence you have placed in us, and I assure you that we will devote our best efforts to your representation. For a number of reasons, we have agreed to take your case on a contingency fee basis. As a result, Ohio Revised Code §4705.15 and the Ohio Rules of Professional Conduct require that our agreement be set forth in writing and signed by both of us.

A contingent fee is an attorney fee that is payable only if there is a recovery. Our contingency fee will be 33-1/3 percent of the total amount recovered on your behalf by way of suit, compromise, settlement, verdict, or judgment. Unless we otherwise agree, our fees will be paid when sums are first disbursed to you.

During the course of any litigation, it is necessary to incur expenses for costs such as filing fees paid to the Court (for filing the complaint), expert witness fees and deposition transcription fees. Although we will pay these costs as they are incurred, you are responsible for the expenses associated with your particular case. These costs will be billed to you on a monthly basis so you will know the amount of the expenses as the case progresses. However, you will not be responsible for paying any expenses until the conclusion of the case. Moreover, if for some reason we do not prevail in this matter, you will not be obligated to pay any of the expenses advanced on your behalf. If we are successful in obtaining a recovery for you, at the time the money is to be disbursed, our contingency fee will first be deducted from any recovery, followed by a deduction of the expenses.

Our firm also will agree to represent you in the event of an appeal. As your case progresses, we will continually evaluate the likelihood of success or failure of your claims, and the likelihood that one or more parties may appeal a judgment rendered. As we assess those probabilities together, our discussion will include estimating the costs associated with any appeal.
